

Universal Gravity

This morning, I came across the term universal gravity, and it struck me as both fascinating and profound. Let me start with a disclaimer—I was a good student in high school, but I was never a fan of physics, astronomy, or anything related to the mechanics of the universe. So, if you respect me, please refrain from quizzing me on those subjects!

That said, the concept of universal gravity captivated me today. This fundamental force, discovered long ago, governs everything in our physical world. It keeps us grounded, pulls us back when we fall, and reminds us that we are always within its grasp. Gravity is a constant, an invisible yet undeniable presence in our lives.

But as I reflected on this, another thought emerged: What if love is the true gravity of our lives? Just as we cannot escape the pull of physical gravity, we are also drawn into the force of love. Love holds us together, grounds us, and gives us purpose. While physical gravity binds us to the earth, the gravity of love calls us beyond ourselves, leading us into relationships, sacrifice, and grace.

So, let us not allow the weight of the material world to dominate our lives. Instead, let us follow the pull of love—the gravity of love that lifts us beyond what we can see and into the eternal embrace of God's presence.

Suggested Scripture: Romans 8:38-39

“For I am convinced that neither death nor life, neither angels nor demons, neither the present nor the future, nor any powers, neither height nor depth, nor anything else in all creation, will be able to separate us from the love of God that is in Christ Jesus our Lord.”

Closing Prayer:

Gracious God, You are the force that holds us, the love that pulls us closer. May we not be weighed down by the gravity of this world but instead be lifted by the gravity of Your love. Draw us ever nearer so that we may move in harmony with Your grace and reflect Your love in all we do. Amen.
